

Bertrand Jungling promoted to Managing Director of ID Logistics France

Cavillon, 8 January 2016 - ID Logistics today announced the appointment of Bertrand Jungling as Managing Director of ID Logistics France.

Previously, Bertrand Jungling led ID Logistics' subsidiary in South Africa, having overseen it since its creation in 2012. With effect from 1 January 2016, he has been in charge of strategy, operations and customer relationship management for the Group's logistics business in France.

Like the other 13 Managing Directors of the Group's subsidiaries around the world, Bertrand Jungling will report to Christophe Satin, Managing Director of the ID Logistics Group, who previously held the same role as Managing Director of the French business.

Splitting the duties of Group Managing Director from those of Managing Director of the French business is a natural consequence of ID Logistics' strong expansion in France over the past few years. This decision also reflects the Group's strategic desire to build its activities in France on solid foundations so that it can accelerate the pace of its international development.

Bertrand Jungling, 44, is a graduate of Ecole Centrale Lille engineering school and started his career as Logistics Manager with Auchan. He then honed his supply chain expertise in several managerial roles at ICI Paints, Kronenbourg and AdrexoMail. In 2008, he joined ID Logistics as Contract Manager to handle the key Intermarché, Leclerc and Alinéa accounts. Then in 2012, he went overseas to establish and build up the Group's subsidiary in South Africa as its Chief Executive Officer. He successfully created a nationwide warehousing and distribution network there.

"We are delighted that Bertrand has taken over at the helm of our operations in France. Bertrand has held a variety of positions at the Group, both in France and internationally. He has a perfect grasp of the key issues in logistics and very sound experience as a manager. The decision to turn ID Logistics France into an independent subsidiary reflects our organisation's development, as it is increasingly taking part in global and international competitive tenders. We need strong, decentralized and consistent country to support our customers and maintain close business relationships" commented Eric Hémar and Christophe Satin, Chairman & CEO and Managing Director respectively of the ID Logistics Group.
